

Freshman Elections Upcoming

A meeting for all freshmen desiring to run for class officer will be held tonight at 8 p.m. in 115 JKB. At this meeting nominations will be made.

Each prospective candidate must have passed the test in the ASBYU Constitution. The test will be given immediately following the meeting.

Each candidate should bring a completed nomination form to the meeting. Name forms and copies of the Constitution can be picked up from the Student Relations office, fourth floor, Wilkinson Center.

Potential candidates are urged to bring a wallet picture of themselves along with a list of their name and qualifications of which will be printed in the Universe prior to the election.

Important dates for candidates to circle are the primary elections of October 12 and 13 and the final voting on November 19 and 20.

These announcements were made at the election orientation meeting sponsored by the Elections Committee held earlier. According to Cheryl Munn, of the Committee, the purpose of the meeting was to "enthuse freshmen about their elections."

Chairman Dennis Cheney induced the meeting stressing methods of running a campaign, the duties of the campaign manager, the procedures and rules to be followed during the campaign and a calendar of campaign events.

Witches, Wizards At Forum

Today's forum assembly will reflect registration frustration as in a wizards, class officers and folk dancers.

Students arriving at the fieldhouse at 10 a.m. will discover the answer to the age-old question, "Will fearful timid freshman find success at a large university?"

After being rescued from the depths of registration disengagement by a kind of "nitch witch" freshman Dorothy will journey through Y land happily searching for her niche at BYU.

The cultural office initiators of the Hello Week Assembly have dubbed the presentation, "Nitches." Chairman of the show is Susan Christensen and directors are Toni Odekerk and Kim Cameron. Script writers are Maren Jeppsen and Susan Birch. Susan McNamara is the Choreographer, Music is by Jim Wilson.

A large cast will sing and dance over the blue button road and portray such characters as the Headless Man, Robot Man, Wall Flower, the Wizard and the good and bad nitches. Oratorio Choir and University Chorale will perform, directed by Dr. Ralph Woodward.

BYU folk dancers will perform in the production which will portray every angle of BYU life, from the lack of P.E. class cards to an "academic discussion" of the parking problem.

President Brown . . .

Fireside Sunday

President Hugh B. Brown of the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will speak at the first BYU Eight Stake Fireside this year.

Beginning at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Smith Fieldhouse, the fireside program will also feature music by the BYU Oratorio Choir.

President Brown has been a member of the First Presidency of the Church since 1961, and has been First Counselor in the First Presidency since October, 1963.

EXPERIENCED LEADER

But his experience in leadership positions in the Church is accompanied by years of leadership work in other fields.

As a young man, he practiced law in Canada. Then, during World War I, he served in the Canadian Army, where he attained the rank of major.

He later became professor of religion and coordinator of veterans affairs at BYU. In 1956, when he was called to the Council of the Twelve, President Brown was president and manager of Richland Oil Development Co. Ltd. of Canada.

Before becoming a general authority, President Brown had served as president of the Lethbridge (Canada) and Granite Stakes. He was also president of the British Mission from 1937-1940 and 1945-1946. He was called to be an Assistant to the Twelve in 1953.

President Brown has been married since 1936 to Zina Young Card. They are the parents of eight children, all of whom attended BYU.

The Secret of Success

Wednesday's Universe carried an article about three of the new Regional Church Representatives appointed by The Church. These men and 66 others will be expected to shoulder much of the administrative burden of The Church since they will function in direct association with the wards and stakes.

To many, this change in Church organization is a major milestone. To others, who have observed closely, it is but the initial phase of a large organizational increase designed to cope with the accelerated growth of The Church.

Collectively and as individuals these men have posted tremendous records of achievement and have demonstrated unusual ability to resolve problems and plan effectively.

It is probably this ability to plan effectively that can be singled out as a prime unifying attribute of the group.

These men began planning for a career of leadership the day they said yes to their first opportunity and have continued in their programs up to their present level of responsibility. In planning futures of accomplishment most of these men had to decide early what things they wanted to include in their lives. They had to develop attitudes which would help them achieve their goals. Most important, they had to make opportunities rather than waiting for the right ones to come along.

During the next few years The Church, the nation, and the world will be calling upon our generation to fill the leadership positions of a dynamic and exploding population.

How many of us have already assumed the responsibility of this leadership?

Only those who make this decision now, will be ready to render effective service when the call comes.

Recently a young man was observed coming out of a dark chapel late at night with an arm full of posters. A brief discussion with him revealed that he was distributing publicity for an M-Men and Gleaner function... but why at 1:00 a.m.?

Investigation revealed that he was working two full-time jobs, teaching a priesthood quorum, writing for a local newspaper, and rebuilding a wrecked car. In addition to this he was serving as Stake M-Men president and had stayed up several nights preparing the posters he was now delivering.

The suggestion was made that he should organize committees for the publicity work and then he wouldn't have to do it himself. To this he replied "We had lots of volunteers to handle it... when we finally reached the deadline it turned out that no one had done the work needed because he had been too busy working a part-time or full-time job."

So it turned out that this young man who worked 80 hours a week and filled a number of responsible positions was the only one in the group who could find time to do one more job.

Why is it that the busiest and most productive people are always the first to offer support or shoulder additional responsibility when needed? Why is it that men who are as busy as the 69 new representatives can find the many extra hours needed for their new Church calling?

It is because they have planned to be successful leaders and have worked, and are working, their plans effectively. What are you planning?

Expel.

That's a dreaded word in everyone's vocabulary, an accepted fact that around school circles, the phrase "be expelled" connotes an ultimate punishment. More of a serious minded school class connect expulsion with a definitely bad action, or lack of action, study-wise.

In lower grades, the blunt term was "expel." But, college campuses, the trend is to "suspend" and then "dismiss."

Recently, BYU drafted a change in present academic standards concerning a student's probation period before he is dealt the unreal blow of being "suspended."

Though it's hoped the majority of students here won't have to worry about suspension, the cliché goes "one new knows." Last spring, 1,268 students were on academic probation.

The explanation of the recent change is (to the average writer!) confusing. But, in the long-run, the change is to the student's advantage.

First, a student receives an academic warning if his BYU cumulative grade average is above the minimum standard, but his GPA for the last semester is below the minimum required (1.75 or C- for freshmen and 2.00 or C for sophomores, juniors, and seniors).

Then, if his BYU record does not meet the minimum requirement (1.75 for freshmen and 2.00 thereafter) he receives a shortage of grade points, he is placed on academic probation.

Here is the change, quoted from the Academic Standards Office brochure: "A student will be suspended from the University if at the end of any probationary semester his cumulative record at BYU shows a shortage of grade points from that which is required (1.75 for freshmen and 2.00 thereafter), and his current semester's work does not show a 4.00 grade-point surplus above that which is required for his class."

The process is figured with the help of a grade-point conversion table available in the Academic Standards Office.

Trevor L. Christensen, the office's assistant director, explains the significance of the new ruling. "Before the change, it was possible to be on probation all four years of school, and then it was a real effort to get back in good standing before graduation. Now, when a student is on probation, he must start working immediately to get off."

If a student meets the "bitter end" instead of probation requirements, he still has a chance for redemption.

A student who has been suspended may, with some effort, qualify for readmission. He must do preparatory work in a different environment or continue his studies on semester before applying. He may do (a) 10 hours of Home Study with a 2.5 GPA in each class, (b) 15 hours of transfer work done all at one time at another college, with a 2.5 GPA or (c) an equivalent program approved by the Academic Standards Committee.

After completing one of these alternatives, the student may apply for readmission.

Students who are still confused about academic standards may visit Room B-202, Snoot Administration Building for a complete explanation.

However, with these requirements — their complexity and time-consumption—it might be easier on the student (at a last resort) to study and stay in school!

GOOD SHOW

Editor:

students, out of necessity must reside in off-campus housing. In order to protect the interests of both the landlords and the students, the university has organized a department of off-campus housing.

This university department is supposed to insure that off-campus housing adheres to certain minimum standards stipulated in a manual published by the University. It has been our experience in dealing with both the landlords and the university department that has prompted us to write this letter.

It seems as though the interests of the students are always put below those of the landlord. When a student inquires of the off-campus housing department as to what the minimum specifications of off-campus housing are, he receives some sort of evasive answer.

The department will not give the student a detailed report of what is expected of the landlord. When we sign contracts, and in doing so give a sizeable amount of money, we feel that we are entitled to know what is expected of the landlord along with what is expected of us.

If Brigham Young University is really interested in student welfare, let them prove it by letting the students know what their rights are.

GOOD SHOW

Editor:

A thousand BRAVOS! Last year I was a student at Brigham Young, and like most freshmen, was disappointed with the censorship of the required health text. Our Mormon society shouts the glory of God is intelligence and to learn is to be, but the first whisperings of life, other than we know it, chill the heart and singe our soul.

Maybe it was the distance that prompted my returning home. But I am now enrolled at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and the chaos this incident has stirred has its echo three thousand miles away. One can however, learn regardless of the environment, but a quest for knowledge in all things makes the wisest man. Education should never be stifled, or it ceases to be an education.

Your editorial stated the problem nicely, but it is stated even more aptly in PROVERBS, 10:13: "In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found; but a rod is for the back of him that is void of understanding. Wise men lay up knowledge..."

Most sincerely,

N.Y. (UPI) — U.S. Marines made the deadliest concentrated bombing in the history of the war to break the back of the north siege of Con Thien by North Vietnamese forces northward, a U.S. spokesman today.

One of the most notable of the war because it is a direct invasion across border by 35,000 to 40,000 Vietnamese regulars intent on capturing the northern province of South Vietnam. The cost — more than 300 marines and more than 3,000 killed.

Dirksen Hits Critics Of Johnson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senator Everett M. Dirksen lectured fellow Republicans Tuesday day for "demeaning" President Johnson in the eyes of the world and rejected calls for a letup in the Vietnam war effort.

In a desk-pounding defense of Johnson's policies, Dirksen scorned suggestions by Republicans and Democrats that the United States halt bombing raids against North Vietnam. He said such a move would threaten the lives of American fighting men.

And he turned down a new peace plan proposed Tuesday by Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., that would test Communist willingness to talk peace by stopping all U.S. military activities in Vietnam.

If the Communists failed to respond, Symington suggested, "then the United States would feel free to pursue this war in any manner of its own choosing."

Students Learn How To Dance

by Lauri Williams

University Culture Writer
Why do BYU students take social dancing?

The answer is predictable, "to learn how to dance."

And learn they do! From the waltz to group dances. The courses in social dance include Latin American, American Ballroom, International Dance, and Techniques in Teaching Dance, among others.

National Dance Forms is designed especially for prospective elementary school teachers and includes round, square, folk, and some social dancing, in addition to children's games.

The enrollment, approximately 5,275, includes mostly freshmen and returned missionaries. They take it for many reasons. Paul Adolphson, a sophomore returned missionary, wants to "meet some good looking girls." Freshman Gwen Yates took the class in hopes of meeting boys.

One freshman boy who signed up for the course, (1) to learn to dance, (2) for the social aspect, claims it "hasn't been too social so far."

There's still a chance for him, though, since nearly all the social dance classes have approximately the same number of boys and girls, with a few girls left over. The National Dance Forms course has more girls, since it is required for education majors. Typical ones have 48 girls and three boys, or 50 girls and no boys at all.

One returned missionary desires to learn to dance so he can go to social functions and not just sit around.

Many a student forgot the "old fashioned" steps when the stomp dances took over several years ago. "I have to learn to dance—right—sometimes," stated a freshman boy. Other students chose dance over regular P.E. to fill their requirements without "overly exerting" themselves.

For all these reasons, Brigham Young University has the largest social dance program in the world, according to Burton Olson, head of the social dance department. There are five full-time instructors, plus 11 assistants.

BYU Artist Makes Debut

by Camilla Miner
Culture Editor

Artist Michael Coleman may make it.

If having a one-man exhibit at 21 and selling paintings is any indication of the future, he will be a successful painter.

Coleman is making his debut at a one-man exhibition of oil paintings at the Lamp-Post Gallery, 1615 Foothill Drive, Salt Lake City. The showing runs October 6-22. The gallery is open 6-10 p.m. Monday through Friday, 1-10 p.m. Saturday and 1-6 p.m. Sunday.

The show includes 30 oil paintings and seven etchings.

Friday a reception will be given for the artist at the gallery from 6 to 10 p.m.

Perhaps people are wearied by the crash and crash in most contemporary painting. Perhaps that is why his sensitive peaceful landscapes are selling. As one BYU art professor puts it, "In his paintings there are none of the horrors andights of the day. He appears to be telling us of another almost optimistic day."

Gallery Director Dewey Moore describes him as "a great talent."

According to some of his professors at BYU, Coleman has suddenly emerged as a popular artist. This is unusual for such a young person. This summer, Director Moore was shown his work. The director was so impressed that he offered Coleman a contract.

Under the contract, Michael Coleman has a chance for showings throughout the country including the Kennedy Gallery in New York.

Coleman has been concentrating on painting for the last five years. He can't remember not drawing. His training has been in high school here in Provo and at the BYU.

A senior this year, he thinks part of his success is the result of being committed to a style.

"Too many art students try when I don't."

every new thing they see in the art magazines," he commented. "I don't like the big swashes of color—the things they call art."

His paintings are reminiscent of the Hudson River School Prof. Paul Forster of the art department calls his painting a combination of Inness and Cotot. His favorite colors are grays and greens.

Coleman says the artists he has studied the most are Durand, Kent and Bierstadt, all 19th century landscape artists.

He finds modern art depressing. As he puts it, "You go to one show after another and everything is the same."

The so-called artists talk about their expanding minds but when you see their work, they have nothing to show for it."

Most of his work is landscape. He used to have animals as subjects.

Now the animals and people are vaguely in the background of his scenes.

Why does he paint? "Because I feel miserable, rotten and lonely trend is toward a more sprightly and mammish look. Jackets have started growing, puffing in for a moment to show off the waist. The standard double-breasted style is updated with tabs decorating the sleeves and an added belt.

U senior Michael Coleman begins a 16-day one-man show his paintings, Friday at 6 p.m. at the Lamp-Post Gallery in Salt Lake City.

Plaids, checks and tweeds are replacing the flowery prints of the past. worn with a contrasting sweater, these wool suits are practical for keeping warm in BYU's chilly stadium.

Another way to beat the cold this winter is to wear a new member of the pantsuit set, the vest. When the jacket is left off, you still have a "put-together" look. The sweater can be left in the drawer and a shirt and wide printed tie added for fun.

Just as the gangster era had its effect on pantsuit styles, now an earlier day is taking its turn. Originally worn by English school boys, the knicker-suit is becoming a leader in comfort and chic.

A three piece outfit, including knickers, vest and shirt, is often topped with a matching cap. Ribbed stockings and sturdy shoes complete the little-boy look.

Coeds Having Nuptial Squeeze

from U.S. News & World Report

A quirk in the U.S. population makeup is causing a scarcity of men in the age group where most marriages take place.

Today's shortage of males will turn to a surplus by 1970—but meanwhile traditional marriage patterns are being upset.

Now it's a "marriage squeeze" that has developed in the United States. A nationwide check shows this:

FEMALE SURPLUS

At the principal marrying ages—18 to 21 for women and 20 to 23 for men—the surplus of women now comes to about 500,000.

Marrying patterns for women, as a result, are undergoing marked change.

Teen-age marriages are declining as more and more young women decide to continue their education or go to work for a few years before marrying.

Census figures also show that those young women who marry are lessening their husbands' desire to settle closer to their own ages than in the past. Some are even settling for men younger than themselves—and still others are turning to much older men.

MALE SHORTAGE

Why the changes? The war in Vietnam is contributing to the shortage of marriageable young men. So is the growing pressure on male graduates to continue their education until they are 24 or 25. And Charles Dewey, a psychologist at the Illinois Institute of Technology, stated recently that the supply of potential husbands is being reduced somewhat by a "big rise" in homosexuality among men.

In total numbers, first marriages taking place in the U.S. continue to show a steady rise year by year as youngsters born during the "baby boom" after World War II reach the marrying age.

That "baby boom," however, is producing this problem for young women.

Most of these women—those in their teens—were born when the birth rates of the late 1940's were moving to record highs. But the men—averaging two or three years older—from whom they would normally pick their husbands, were born around the end of World War II, when birth rates were still depressed.

LATER MARRIAGES

Many women, confronted with this shortage of men two or three years older, are choosing to remain single for a while.

This tendency is showing up most among college women. At New York University, for instance, records at two undergraduate colleges show a decline of about 25 percent in the proportion of coeds married while still in school. At Barat College of the Sacred Heart, a Catholic women's school in Chicago's suburbs, the president said:

"Three or four years ago, a girl was panic-stricken if she had not met a potential husband by the end of her junior year in college. If she had not met one by her senior year, she thought she was finished."

Now the number of students dropping out to get married is markedly less, and we have a higher percentage of girls graduating than before."

SOLUTIONS

What also appears to be developing is a trend among young women to settle for husbands more nearly their own age than tradition once dictated.

A study made by the Population Reference Bureau concluded: "Women who marry in their 20's are more likely to marry men of the same age—a reasonable solution."

tion for girls with the marriage gap problem."

Other women, it appears, are choosing the alternatives—in men who are either younger than they are, or who are much older.

THE FUTURE

From officials of the Census Bureau comes the prediction that, if marriage patterns of recent years hold, about a million women will have to postpone getting married in the years between 1965 and 1970.

More cheering to single women looking for husbands is this statistic forecast:

In 1980, there will still be a surplus of women in the prime marrying years, but just one fifth of this year's surplus.

And 1970 promises to become a vintage year for husband seekers when boys born during the "baby boom" of the 1940's come on the marriage market. The result will be a surplus of 185,000 "most marriageable" young men ready to be picked off by the young women of America.

University Cinema Used As Entertainment, Teaching Tool

One of the recent developments in the educational programs at BYU has been the emergence of the University Cinema as an educational tool.

The theater, located in room 184, Jesse Knight Bldg., presents selected films Wednesday through Saturday evenings.

The overall aim of the Cinema is to provide film entertainment which will supplement the written literature already available to faculty and students.

A special feature of this semester's program will be the showing of Laurence Olivier's production of "Othello" and Puccini's "La Bohème."

Professionally trained projectists will be on hand this year to operate new cinemascopes recently purchased for the new season.

An overflow room will be in use when 184 JKB is filled, permitting all students and faculty to see feature on the night they choose.

The Cinema will cater to the quest of faculty members to recommend films. A faculty selection committee will select recommendations for films.

Vast Increase in Wealth Seen in 21st Century

by Louis Cossellis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A noted economist predicted Oct. 2 that the 21st century will bring a vast increase in human wealth—if anyone survives to enjoy it.

Dr. Herman Kahn, director of the Hudson Institute, offered his prophecies—some dismal, some terrifying—at a conference sponsored by the American Institute of Planners in Washington this week.

By the year 2017, Kahn said, increased productivity will raise per capita income in advanced countries to as much as $20,000 a year.

Thanks to industrialization and synthetic foods, "even the poor countries will for the most part enjoy great improvements in living," their traditional standards of living.

FULL LIVES

"In such a world there will be opportunities for creative and exciting lives for many; and orderly, decent and remarkably full lives for the mass of people in the unprecedentedly affluent societies," he told the planners.

But it won't be Utopia.

The technological revolution which confers these boons will bring increasingly dangerous inventions.

In the military realm, "it is possible that the ultimate in weapons, the so-called doomsday machine, which could destroy human life, will not only become technologically feasible; it may even become inexpensive."

Even if mankind manages to avoid committing suicide in the half century, the n

DEBRIS CONTROL

To avoid total contamination of his environment, man by 2017 will have to exercise "an increased degree of control" over the disposal of combustion products, bris and other waste materials which has been accustomed dump into his rivers, oceans and atmosphere.

"Waste heat" from cities must become a serious problem, raising atmospheric temperatures several degrees and altering the climate. Fuel burned in the upper atmosphere by a growing fleet jet planes may upset delicate balanced processes" of weather, complex, and the consequences a mistake become more dangerous.

The technological revolution which confers these boons will bring increasingly dangerous inventions.

In the military realm, "it is pos-

Quicker Exit From Library Is Possible

Are those library exit lines too long? If you find yourself late to class because of the time-consuming lines, then do something to help yourself.

Arrange your books and notebooks in your arms with the back bindings toward the checker. Put the back bindings of books out of your briefcase in a position for the checker to quickly check the contents.

Because the library operates on an open stack system an exit control is necessary. It exists to help the forgetful student who may unintentionally walk out with a book.

The checking procedure is not an infringement on the honor of a student, rather a protection for him:

Brock, Gibson Spark Cards To 2-1 Win

BOSTON (UPI) — Lou Brock, baseball's one-man hit-and-run play, stung gritty Jose Santiago for a recording four hits and "stole" a tense 2-1 victory for the St. Louis Cardinals from the Boston Red Sox Wednesday in the first game of the 1962 World Series.

Brock, who played four hits around cramped Fenway Park in as many official at-bats to tie his series record last accomplished by Maury Wills of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1955, stole two bases and scored both hard-earned St. Louis runs on infield grounders by Roger Maris.

The decisive second run in the seventh inning, which snapped a 1-1 tie, was strictly the result of Brock's eye-popping speed, responsible for 52 stolen bases during the National League season.

Those two runs were all the Cards could scrape together, although they peppered Santiago for 10 hits in the seven innings he worked and drew five walks from Santiago and reliever John Wyatt. But they were all Cards' pitcher Bob Gibson, who made a remarkable recovery from a broken leg suffered in mid-July to win three games in September, needed to remain in command throughout the game.

A crowd of 34,796 packed into the anticipated little ballpark—and hundreds more perched precariously on ledges high atop adjoining buildings—saw Gibson fan 10 batters and scatter six hits.

Gibson, who compiled a 137 record during an abbreviated season, yielded a third-inning homer by Santiago into the net high above the left centerfield scoreboard.

Y-'Poke Duel Looming

By Glen Willardson
Associate Sports Editor

It's Western Day in Laramie this Saturday.

True to the tradition of the West, there will be a showdown between two tough "boomers" who want an early claim to the Western Athletic Conference football championship.

Coach Tom Hudspeth takes his victory-minded Cougars into Wyoming country expecting a duel that will make western gunights look pasty.

BOTH UNDEFEATED

Both Wyoming and BYU are undefeated—Wyoming has victories over Arizona (35-17), Air Force (37-10) and Colorado State (15-10); BYU has conquered New Mexico (44-14) and Western Michigan (44-19).

The Cowboys are high on the national grid ratings; BYU received votes on the UPI poll this week and leads the nation in passing offense. The Cougars' total offense is second nationally.

Poke coach Lloyd Eaton has 27 returning lettermen on his squad, including six All-WAC first team choices.

Standouts on the Cowboy team are Jim Klick, All-American tailback candidate who is averaging four yards a carry in three games; Paul Toscano, defensive specialist converted to quarterback, and leads the conference in total offense.

KICK SPECIALIST

Jerry DePoyer is another man the Cougars will see at lot of. DePoyer, a kicking specialist, has already booted a 55-yard field goal this season and is Wyoming's top scorer.

Vic Washington is another problem for BYU. The fleet-footed defensive man leads the conference in punt returns and covers the Wyoming secondary ubiquitously.

BYU may have a few surprises for the Cowboys. Besides a potent passing attack, the Cougars proved they could move the ball on the ground last week against Western Michigan.

Look for Perry Rodriguez, fullback; Wally Hawkins or any of three quarterbacks—John Edwards, Marc Lyons, or Terry Sanford—can make headway on the ground.

Meanwhile Phil Odle, Casey Sett and John Paterson will be on the pass-receiving end.

Victories over Wyoming will be hard to come by for the Cowboys. Last time BYU won a 14-7 decision in 1962, two tries, both in Laramie, were the Cowboy's string since 1948.

Y Has Off-Campus Campus

BYU classes are not limited to the Provo campus but are conducted in dozens of cities throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

In addition to the BYU Continuation Education Centers at Salt Lake City, Ogden, Idaho Falls and Los Angeles, the University provides special courses wherever a local group feels the need for instruction. Responsible for this program is the BYU Department of Off-Campus Lectures and Courses.

These programs include both credit and non-credit courses. Most of them are taught by regular BYU faculty members who travel from Provo, but for others special teachers approved by the administration are used.

WIDE RANGE

The range of classes possible to teach off-campus is very wide. For example, a graduate education in "Foundations in Reading," is currently being taught by Dr. Floyd Sucher in Manhi, Utah. Students registered for the class are mostly teachers in South Sanpete School District who are taking advantage of the class and applying the credit toward teacher re-certification.

Milton Sharp, chairman of the Department has organized several non-credit programs for locations throughout the United States. A one-day music clinic for example, was conducted Saturday at Tulsa, Oklahoma by J. Spencer Cornwall, former director of the Tabernacle Choir. "Creating a Happy Home," will be taught by Mrs. Darol Hoole at Flagstaff, Ariz., and Boulder City, Nev., Oct. 6.

IN MEXICO

A three-day "Education Week" is planned in Colonia Juarez, Mexico, Oct. 12-14, on subjects from agriculture to music. Faculty there will include Sharp; Clarence Ashton, horticulture; Dr. A. Harold Goodman, music; Mrs. Stella Oaks, supervisor of adult education in Provo City Schools; Dr. Blaine Porter, dean of the College of Family Living; and Lyman Shreeve, languages.

OTHERS PLANNED

Other off-campus programs in the near future are Lyman Stake, Education Day, Oct. 14, at Rock Springs with Dr. Howard Barron, Lynn McKinlay and LaVar Rockwood as faculty; Cleveland, Ohio, Genealogy Workshop, Oct. 14, with Norman Wright; "Charm and Personality Workshop," Mrs. Kathy Taylor, at Afton, Wyo., Oct. 21; and a lecture by Dr. Robert K. Thomas, assistant vice-president, in Detroit, Mich., Nov. 18.

BYU Gets

$1000 Gift

An unrestricted gift of $1000 was presented this week to BYU by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States. James F. Outerbridge, chairman of the board, explained in a letter to President Ernest L. Wilkinson that the gift is one of 160 made to independent institutions of higher learning in the United States. These were selected by an advisory committee of nationally prominent educators.

Outerbridge recognized the "enormous needs of our colleges and universities and the responsibility that rests on us to support this area of endeavor so vital to our nation's continued progress."

Deferments For Engineers

Students seeking a Bachelor of Engineering Science degree are in the five year program, Dr. Earl C. Crockett, academic vice-president stated.

The offerings in chemical, civil, electrical and mechanical engineering are accredited by the Engineering Council for Professional Development as five year programs, and student deferments will be considered on this basis, he said.
